

From the Editor

Editorial: Growth of the Journal

Thomas J. Robertson

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ijom.iaom.com/journal>

The journal in which this article appears is hosted on Digital Commons, an Elsevier platform.

Suggested Citation

Robertson, T. J. (1975). Editorial: Growth of the Journal. International Journal of Oral Myology, 1(4)

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives 4.0 International License.

The views expressed in this article are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the policies or positions of the International Association of Orofacial Myology (IAOM). Identification of specific products, programs, or equipment does not constitute or imply endorsement by the authors or the IAOM.

Editorial

In the past year as the first editor for the International Journal of Oral Myology, I have seen the journal grow from just a very small publication serving the members of the International Association of Oral Myology into a recognized professional publication serving not only members, but almost four hundred non-members and institutions in eleven countries.

The journal through the membership provides an excellent means of communication of what is going on in the association and as of this date, is not being used nearly as effectively as could be. As part of the association news section, I would like for any of our members or readers who are presenting workshops or lectures to send the journal this information; thus adding another benefit to the readers.

The International Journal of Oral Myology, in Volume I Number 3, had two outstanding "Letters to the Editor". Material of this caliber from readers is very much encouraged and needed. I feel that this section is good not only for the association, but also for the individual member and to the profession of oral myology.

In January of 1976, the first directory of the International Association of Oral Myology will be printed. The new directory will include names and addresses of all current members, level of membership, and level of academic achievement. These directories will be sent to members and will also be available for purchase.

An effort has been made this year to publish straightforward information regarding the association and its activities plus to gather information and articles which may benefit the International Association of Oral Myology.

T.J.R